Student Cross-Training Opportunities for Combining Food and Cybersecurity into an Academic Food Systems Education Program

USDA National Institute of Food and Agriculture (NIFA), Higher Ed Challenge, Challenge Grants Program, under Grant Number 2018-70003-27663

$149,890

Mar. 15, 2018 - Mar. 14, 2021

Project Director: Dale Thompson, Co-Project Directors: Steven C. Ricke, Jia Di, and Chase E. Rainwater
The goal of the Food and Cyber Education project, FACE, is to prepare graduate food science students to protect and defend food systems from cyberattacks. Arkansas' top three commodities in terms of value for 2016 were chicken bred for meat (broilers) at $3.1 billion, soybeans at $1.4 billion, and rice at $1 billion. Among the states in the U.S., Arkansas is number 1 in the production of rice and number 2 in the production of broilers. As the food industry continues to automate their systems to monitor and create more efficient production, there is a fear that attackers will gain access gathering information and attacking these systems.

CS10K: Training Arkansas Computing Teachers (TACT)

National Science Foundation, Grant No. 1543195

$991,664

Oct. 1, 2015 – Sep. 30, 2019

Dale R. Thompson (PI) and Bryan Hill (co-PI)

The goals of this research were to create computer science (CS) talent, provide access to CS instruction for high schools, and train Arkansas high school teachers to become certified to teach computer science by the end of the 3-year grant. The TACT project trained a total of 64 in-service K-12 teachers and two pre-service teachers from 2016 until 2018. These 66 teachers represent 48 different schools from the Northwest, Central, Southwest, and Northeast areas of the State of Arkansas. The course materials developed by the project are available at the project website, <https://tact.uark.edu>.

EAGER: Fingerprinting RFID Tags with Transfer-of-Ownership Capabilities

National Science Foundation, Grant No. CNS-1053286

$199,967

Sept. 1, 2010 – August 31, 2012

Dale R. Thompson (PI) and Jia Di (co-PI)

The goal of this research was to re-define the authentication of an RFID tag from being something the tag “knows” to being something the tag “is,” like a fingerprint, and to develop new hardware primitives for transferring ownership of the tag by manipulating the fingerprint in a controlled way. The research may lead to secure and private contactless identification and transfer of ownership of objects.

RFID Information Systems Security (INFOSEC) for Nation-wide Engineering Education

National Science Foundation, Grant No. DUE-0736741

$149,703

Jan. 1, 2008 – Dec. 31, 2009

Dale R. Thompson (PI) and Jia Di (co-PI)

The goal of this research was to create modules for teaching RFID, which include security and privacy. The course materials developed by the project are available at the project website.

CT-ER: Anti-Counterfeiting RFID Tags

During this timeframe, I led the CSCE department of approximately 700 students and 20 faculty during the COVID-19 pandemic when courses were being taught in three modes of delivery: face-to-face, remote synchronous, or hybrid. This required being flexible and agile to accommodate decreased room capacities, requiring that all classes be streamed to students and recorded, while managing a changing environment. I worked with staff, college, and university to transition to a new financial system that required many adjustments of business processes. Finally, I coordinated the virtual ABET evaluation visit that happens every six years for the B.S. in Computer Engineering and B.S. in Computer Science programs.
